Conference Aim

The aim of AITPM's 2006 National Conference in Melbourne is to explore what planners and engineers can do to develop and sustain the efficient and safe transport of people and goods. The conference will focus on how we can better operate our transport networks through improved planning, better design and coordinated implementation.

Delivering Sustainable Transport – "it's got legs"

The main themes of the conference are as follows:

Integrated Transport: Policy and Management

- Creating an integrated transport model
- Service planning
- System management
- Promotion
- Pricing
- Role of different tiers of Government

Engineering Design Tools: Network Principles and Practical Implementation Issues

- Network concepts and priorities
- Designing integrated networks

- Managing conflict between users
- Catering for individual modal needs

Managing Network Quality

- Standards
- Performance monitoring
- Professional training and skill development
- Development of appropriate performance indicators

Case Studies: Demonstrating Change

- Learning from history
- Local traffic and transport responses
- Managing the change towards transport sustainability
